(RAS1) Masculinities and Hate in Authoritarian Times

Monday June 03 @ 6:00 pm - 7:30 pm (Eastern Daylight Time)
Online via the CSA - Complete the form to receive the Zoom login link for this session
Session Format: Panel
Affiliation: Research Advisory Subcommittee

New patterns in global politics have emerged in the past two decades, with a striking resurgence and re-making of gendered power. In Europe and the Americas, an authoritarian white masculinity has gained traction; in different ways in India, China and parts of the Muslim world, authoritarian leadership merges with religious and ethnic politics; in Egypt, Afghanistan and Myanmar military regimes are re-established. After a generation of worldwide change towards gender equality, a powerful though uneven backlash has developed. Not only straight men can be mobilized in support, but also people from a range of gender positions and sexual identities, including the white women who benefit from connection with bearers of authoritarian white masculinity. Some of the most toxic forms of masculinity are motivated by hate that can lead to crime. We need to understand how these patterns became possible, what support authoritarian masculinities have mobilized, their links to hate, and how they are contested.

This session will feature discussions of authoritarian masculinities from an intersectional perspective to understand how hate enables specific forms of masculinities in authoritarian contexts.

Panelists:
- Raewyn Connell, Professor Emeritus, Sociology, University of Sydney
- Robert Innes, Indigenous Studies, McMaster University
- Andrey Kasimov and Melanie Heath, Sociology, McMaster University
- Jillian Sunderland, University of Toronto

Organizer: Melanie Heath, McMaster University

(FTS2) An Intersectional Multi-Gender Panel on Anti-Fat Bias as Reductive Harm

Tuesday June 04 @ 11:00 am - 12:30 pm (Eastern Daylight Time)
Online via the CSA - Complete the form to receive the Zoom login link for this session
Session Format: Panel

This panel commits to decentering whiteness and heteropatriarchy through the positioning of the intersectional lives of a intergenerational kin structure. The panelists critically reflect on the cultural practices that come to institutionalize the notion of 'bodies that matter' across space and time. Additionally, this panel hopes to fill the gap on gendered experiences of fatness as they explore bodies and spaces with a specific focus on the experience of fat gendered bodies and the diet and wellbeing industrial complex. Overall, the panel explores intersections of race, gender and embodiment while navigating fat scholarship, complicated masculinities and fatphobic barriers to accessing spaces and one's body.

Moderators: Ramanpreet A. Bahra, York University; Kelsey Ioannoni, Wilfrid Laurier University

Panelists:

- Mark Allwood, Cultural Studies, Trent University
- Kathryn Last, PhD Candidate, Cultural Studies, Trent University
- Gin Marshall, PhD Student, Social Work, York University

Tuesday June 04 @ 11:00 am to 12:30 pm (Eastern Daylight Time)
Online via the CSA - Complete the form to receive the Zoom login link for this session
Session Format: Paper Presentations

This panel devotes considered attention to how social trauma – collective experiences of suffering and adversity – is experienced, negotiated and resolved. Drawing on the diverse cases of racial reparations, territorial stigmatization and political violence, it engages with the interplay of social exclusion, symbolic boundaries and existential anxiety within modern societies.

Chair: James Walsh, Ontario Tech University

Presentations:

1. Jenny Nilsson, York University
Initiated "Reparations" Programs in the U.S. 2020-2022: An Analysis of the Twitter Discourse

2. Rex Wang, York University

(SCS1) Academic Basics: Applying for Research Funding

Wednesday June 05 @ 5:00 pm - 6:30 pm (Eastern Daylight Time)
Online via the CSA - Complete the form to receive the Zoom login link for this session
Session Format: Panel
Affiliation: Student Concerns Subcommittee

An integral part of academic research involves applying for funding, whether that is funding through a university award competition or council/SSHRC funding. In this workshop hosted by the CSA Student Concerns Subcommittee, students will have the opportunity to hear from other graduate students and researchers about their experiences navigating the funding application process. During the workshop, students will have the option to join different discussion rooms which will be hosted by subcommittee members and other facilitators. The focus of these rooms will be collaborative discussions where attendees can discuss their experiences, challenges, and more with each other and the facilitators. The workshop will cover a broad range of potential topics as we work to demystify the funding process.

Organizer: J Overholser, University of Calgary

Workshop Facilitators:

- Kelsey Harvey, McMaster University

(RAS2) Creating Communities of Care: Addressing Vulnerabilities in Conducting and Disseminating Research Online

Friday June 07 @ 3:00 pm - 4:30 pm (Eastern Daylight Time)
Online via the CSA - Complete the form to receive the Zoom login link for this session
Session Format: Panel
Affiliation: Research Advisory Subcommittee

This panel, facilitated by MediaSmarts, will build on previous conversations about the opportunities and challenges of doing research online. As we continue in this digital age, researchers may feel pressure to maintain an online presence and disseminate their research online. However, not all researchers have the necessary digital literacy skills to protect themselves online, which may leave them vulnerable to threats like online harassment and hate. Not only may they be unprepared for these challenges, but the burden of resolving them typically defaults to individual researchers. It is not always clear how to seek resources, where to find support, and how to proceed in the face of these challenges. This session will address how Departments and Universities can build communities of care for researchers working online. Panelists will provide practical suggestions for how to support collective online resilience while also recognizing the primarily gendered, invisible, and emotional labour that goes into developing these communities.

Moderators: Kara Brisson-Boivin, MediaSmarts and and Khadija Baig, Media Smarts

Panelists:

- Sonia Chiasson, Professor, Co-Director of the Graduate Program in Human-Computer Interaction, Carleton University.
- Zoey Jones, Ph.D. Sociology Alumni Carleton University and AUPE research officer
- Kaitlynn Mendes, Associate Professor and Canada Research Chair in Inequality and Gender, Western University
- Ms. Archana Sridhar, Assistant Provost, Office of the Vice-President and Provost, University of Toronto
